

ABSTRACT

A film or sheet containing an optionally crosslinked organic polymer having a high degree of crosslinking and having a little amount of residual solvent is obtained within a short period of time under a low pressure by bringing a film or sheet containing an organic polymer into contact with a superheated water vapor.